'At present, the Church and each of us are held between the two gravitational fields. On the one hand the force of death and evil, a force from which in worldly terms there is no way of escape. On the other hand the force of God, a force of truth and of love. But once Christ is risen, the pull of love is stronger than that of hatred; the force of life is stronger than that of death. Perhaps this is actually the situation of the Church in every age, perhaps it is our situation? It always seems as if she ought to be failing and disappearing, and yet she is always already saved. And as Saint Paul said right at the start of the Church's existence: "We are as dying, and behold we live" '
